Type of disability

Definition of disability under the Equality Act 2010

According to the Equality Act 2010, disability is "a physical or mental impairment which has a substantial and long-term adverse effect on your ability to carry out normal day-to-day activities"

Physical or mental impairment can include:

- physical impairments, such as mobility difficulties
- sensory impairments such as those affecting hearing or sight
- learning difficulties, including people with specific learning difficulties such as dyslexia and dyspraxia
- mental health conditions or illnesses which have a long-term effect such as depression and anxiety, panic attacks, phobias, eating disorders, obsessive compulsive disorders, schizophrenia and bipolar affective disorder
- genetic and progressive conditions, if the condition affects your ability to carry out normal day-to-day activities such as motor neurone disease, muscular dystrophy
- conditions which are characterised by a number of cumulative effects such as pain or fatigue
- hidden impairments such as asthma or diabetes, if these have an effect on your day-to-day activities
- past history of impairment this applies if you are no longer disabled but met the definition in the past.

Moreover, as disability counts

- cancer, including skin growths that need removing before they become cancerous
- a visual impairment this means you're certified as blind, severely sight impaired, sight impaired or partially sighted
- multiple sclerosis
- an HIV infection even if you don't have any symptoms
- a severe, long-term disfigurement for example severe facial scarring or a skin disease

LEGISLATIVE FRAMEWORK ON DISABILITY

National Legislation on Disability

- Equality Action 2010 protects individuals from any discrimination and, among other things, replaced the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. According to chapter 1, sector 6, it defines what disability is.

Equality Act 2010 (legislation.gov.uk)

- In addition, there is the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, which has been in force since 2010. The goal is the equal treatment of people with disabilities and their full adaptation to social life and action. It concerns all kinds of disabilities, physical, mental, intellectual or sensory impairments.

TRANSPORTATION

The rights of people with disabilities

Buses and Coaches

Scotland's coaches and buses must be accessible for people with disabilities based on the size and age of the bus.

Buses covered by the law must have:

- space for a standard wheelchair
- a boarding device to enable wheelchair users to get on and off, such as a ramp
- a minimum number of priority seats for disabled passengers
- handrails to assist disabled people
- colour contrasting handrails and steps to help partially sighted people
- easy to use bell pushes
- equipment to display the route and destination.

For wheelchairs:

In case the bus is not full and there is room for a wheelchair, you should be able to be transported by bus unless

- your chair is very heavy or very big (taking up a space when you are in it of more than 700 mm wide or 1200 mm long)
- you need to travel with your legs fully extended or the backrest reclined and there is not enough space on the vehicle to allow for this
- your wheelchair isn't safe.

Some buses will be fitted with:

- a portable ramp
- steps
- vehicle lowering systems.

You can ask for help either from the driver or from the conductor. However, they may refuse to help if they have safety and health concerns.

There is also information on the website that one can make sure that his wheelchair is safe, what can he do in case he does not receive the required assistance required.
